Air, Water, Structural Testing

The industry demands products that are proven to perform. System air leakage, resistance to water penetration, and the ability to withstand structural wind loads are the critical metrics established to ensure products on the market can handle the environmental conditions they were intended for.

When evaluating designs or seeking product certification, essential decisions hinge on test data. Understanding the importance of accurate results, Molimo invests in quality equipment and instruments and regular calibration cycles to provide the reliable data you expect. Additionally, Molimo staffs licensed Professional Engineers to oversee testing and approve reports ensuring that your products are always tested correctly and to the industry standards.

Always conscious of time and project schedules we move samples through the appropriate testing sequence quickly, providing status updates, and getting you to what matters, results.

We do not stop at the industry standard tests. We are also willing to assist with any custom or specialized needs that unique projects can present. Our experienced staff can help to formulate the appropriate evaluation for any application.

Molimo is a company built on experience. Together we exceed 350 years of expertise in the building products testing industry. We prioritize accuracy, speed, and integrity.
